Chess Championship Is Halted Challenger Disputes Decision in Angry Public Debate

By Serge Schmemann
New York Times Service MOSCOW - The president of the World Chess Federation abruptly halted the marathon nship duel between Anatoli Karpov and Gary Kasparov on Friday, despite protestations by both that they wanted to continue. At a stormy news conference disrupted by the surprise entry of the reigning champion, Mr. Karpov, heated accusations from Mr. Kasparov and a 90-minute backroom conference. Florencio Campomanes of the Philippines, the feder-ation's president, annulled the fivematch and ordered a new one for September. That match will start at 0-0. Mr. Campomanes said his decision was prompted by the fact that the match, which after five months and 48 games had broken existing records for the ancient game, "has the challenger abides by the deciexhausted the physical if not the psychological resources not only of the participants but all those con-match would be set by a federation

Last Friday, the authorities announced plans to loosen the regula-tions governing nonwhite access to ess areas designated as white. The proposals, not yet law, made it technically easier for nonwhites to trade in 44 existing "free trade areas." But, like many of the recent suggestions of change, there were conditions and hedges.

Mr. Botha has made clear that his planned changes do not affect such keystones of apartheid as the homelands to which black people are consigned according to tribe, the notion of "ethnicity" by which the whites have sought traditionally to divide and rule blacks, and egislation that segregates housing and education.

Officials said Thursday that this could be the most hopeful sign coming out of the Arab world in

But they added that there were so many open questions that it would be premature to be optimis tic about the immediate prospects. Among the questions were whether direct Arab-Israeli talks would result or whether the PLO would now accept UN Security Council Reso-lutions 242 and 338 on bringing about a peace settlement. Resolutions 242 and 338 call on Israel to withdraw from occupied Arab territory and implicitly recog-nize Israel's right to exist within internationally recognized secure

The administration officials said it was important that the Arabs had described the understanding to them as "a framework agreement," and not as a detailed accord.

"It is obviously less than a full agreement," a State Department official said. "It is really just a number of generalities, and that is why our response is in the form of questions. If it means that there is an Arab party ready to negotiate directly with Israel, then it is positive. If it means acceptance of Resolution 242, then it is good. We don't have the answers now."

Secretary of State George P. Shultz, when asked about the unpublished understanding between King Hussein and Mr. Arafat, announced Monday in Amman, said Thursday that "our knowledge is kind of fuzzy."

"We don't know exactly what is coming out of this discussion and I suppose it will sort of evolve along," he said in an interview over (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

U.S. Finds Under New Law, Some Nations Could Lose Aid By Joel Brinkley New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - The State Department's annual report on worldwide parcotics production shows that in most of the major drug-producing countries, marijuana, coca and opium-poppy crops were larger in 1984 than in 1983.

The report, issued Thursday, will have greater impact this year be-cause of a new law that says President Ronald Reagan must cut off foreign aid to countries that in his view have not made adequate pro-

The United States has diplomatrelations with nine of the 12 known major drug-producing countries — Belize, Bolivia, Burma, Colombia, Jamaica, Mexico, Pakistan, Peru and Thailand.

In seven of these, all except Colombia and Pakistan, narcotic crops increased in the last year. The seven all receive U.S. aid.

A senior White House official said it was unlikely that the administration would propose eliminat-ing aid. But he also said, "If after careful consideration it was considered advisable for a given country, you would have support for it

The production of coca, a leaf used to make cocaine, grew by more than one-third overall in the three traditional coca-growing countres: Bolivia, Peru and Colombia. In addition, the State Department said it had discovered that Ecuador has become a major cocaproducing country.

Worldwide production of opium - used to make heroin marijuana declined slightly, the report said, even though most countries producing those drugs had crops as large or larger than in

The world's opium crop dropped by about 11-percent because of poor weather in Afghanistan that severely reduced the harvest. The worldwide marijuana crop also fell by about 11 percent as a result of what the report called the most significant achievement in drug enforcement last year. Colombia's war on drug trafficking. Colombia, the largest producer of marijuana for export to the United States, eradicated as much as one-third of its known marijuana crop last year, the report said. At the same time, its coca crop increased slightly.

In last year's report, the first under the new law, the State Department set reduction goals for sax countries — Belize, Bolivia, Colombia, Pakistan, Peru and Thailand - as the law requires. Only Thailend met its goal, this year's report indicated, while Colombia met the target for one crop but not for the other. The new report sets goals for all the countries.

Senator Paula Hawkins, a Republican of Florida, who was the principal sponsor of the new law, said Thursday, "I am going to put a bold on the aid to all the countries that have not made progress."

Representative Charles B. Rangel, a New York Democrat who sponsored the bill in the House, called the report "blatantly honest" and urged President Reagan "to take a leadership position" on the foreign aid question. The government's praise for Co-

The Unshakable Reagan: Body Language Conveys His Deepest Convictions

When He Talks of Space Defense, a Hand Gesture Can Be a Show of Force

By Hedrick Smith New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - When President Ronald Reagan sits down face-to-face with four reporters by a roaring fire in his Oval Office, as he did for a recent interview, he seems more unshakable on certain pet ideas than he does on the television screen or in print. The force of his position comes across as much in his body language as in what he

From afar, many people are tempted to assume that some things any president says are for effect and may represent posturing, perhaps at the start of complicated negotiations with Congress or

But from close up, Mr. Reagan communicates not only his stand on policy matters but also the hierarchy of his priorities. He conveys a clear division between the issues forced on him by circumstance or the bureaucracy and those on which he has deep personal feelings.

It is in such intimate settings that congressional leaders and top advisers take his measure and then conclude that it is probably useless to try to change his mind on those key issues.

Consider the Strategic Defense Initiative, his proposal for a space-based defense against nuclear siles. In a 30-minute interview that raised 27 questions, mostly on foreign policy, it was clear that this was the issue that moved him most deeply, the one on which he had the strongest convictions.

For much of the time Mr. Reagan settled back:

comfortably, his blue suit and wavy brown hair framed by the pattered design of a wing-backed chair. At ease and affable, he listened to the questions, responding to the first ones briefly. Then, as he warmed to the give-and-take, his sponses came punctuated with a little shake of the head, a smile, a sign of emphasis here or there, or a hand reached out in gesture. Just before the interview began, Mr. Reagan had run through a 20-minute 'prep," as they call it in the White House, with Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, and two deputy press secretar-ies, Marlin Fitzwater and Robert B. Sims, on the topics they expected to arise. It was obvious that they had rehearsed him well on the political fraces that ensued in South Korea over the return of the exiled opposition leader Kim Dae Jung and on the latest developments in Central America, as well as on the subjects of budget

For the visit of King Fahd of Sandi Arabia, he already had been thoroughly briefed on the admin-istration's diplomacy in the Middle East, and he dealt with those issues handily. But when the issue of strategic defense came up, his personal chemistry and his body language nged. He became totally engaged. He leaned his body into the discussion, moving forward in the chair and taking the conversational offensive.

Words flowed with little prompting. It happened more than once, each answer on that topic reinforcing the impression that to others, especially to top officials within his administra-tion, he must already have conveyed such firmness and conviction that little room was left for serious debate on that issue.

"You're right," said a senior White House offi-cial. "He does feel strongly on that one. Of course, I don't think anybody in a senior position in the administration disagrees with him." There may indeed be unanimity at top levels now. But just six or eight weeks ago, senior State Department officials were talking about using the American push on strategic defenses as a bargaining chip if Moscow would agree to the deep reduc-tions in its offensive nuclear arsenal that Mr. Reagan has sought for two years. On Monday, more clearly than ever before, the president indicated that was not his intention. On other arms control issues, such as how Soviet violations of past agreements might affect his willingness to sign a new accord, he begged off a direct answer so as not to affect the forthcoming talks. With his back straight against his chair, he parried: "Now, we are getting into the area of actual negotiating and I don't think we should be discussing that." But on the Strategic Defense Initiative, populary referred to as the "star wars" program, he showed no such hesitancy,

Pro-Israeli Militia in Lebanon Is Said To Have Lost Almost Half Its Fighters

SIDON, Lebanon — About 800 men belonging to an Israeli-backed militia in southern Lebanon have deserted, surrendered or been captured in the past two weeks, security sources said Friday.

In the past few months, the sources said, the size of the force has been almost halved.

According to the sources, the militia, the South Lebanese Army, now has about 1,200 men, compared with 2,200 late last year.

General Ori Orr, the commander of Israeli troops in Lebanon, said earlier in the week that up to one-third of the militia's soldiers had left the force. Last year, the Israelis expressed hope that the militia would act as a security force in southern Lebanon after they left. Sources in Arnal, the main Shiite

"The Chinese frontier forces were driven beyond forbearance and were forced to counterattack, repulsing the enemy and giving a

Harvard Sells South Africa Investment

CAMBRIDGE, Massachusetts (AP) — Harvard University has announced that it has sold stock valued at $1 million in Baker International Corp., because the company did not adhere to reasonable standards to improve the welfare of its nonwhite employees in South Africa.

It was the first time that the university has sold holdings from its $1.8billion stock portfolio under its policies governing investment in companies doing business in South Africa. The move came two days after Stanford University in California voted to sell its stock in Motorola Inc. if the company made any further sale of communications equipment to the South African military or police.

Harvard will continue investing in companies that are actively trying to improve conditions for their South African black employees, but is closely scrutinizing companies that do not appear to meet ethical standards, President Derek Bok said in a statement.

Portuguese Cabinet is Reshuffled

LISBON (Reuters) - The ruling Socialist and Social Democratic parties reshuffled their coalition cabinet on Friday following a change of leadership in the Social Democratic Party.

The changes were agreed to this week in meetings between Prime Minister Mario Soares, a Socialist, and Rui Machete, who replaced Carlos Mota Pinto as head of the Social Democrats last Sunday in a dispute over strategy. Mr. Machete, who had been minister of justice, was sworn in as deput prime minister and minister of defense, replacing Mr. Mota Pinto. Mário Raposo was sworn in as minister of justice and João de Deus Pinherio became minister of education. Both men are Social Democrats. U.K. Mine Leaders Urge Talks on Plan

LONDON (UPI) - Mine leaders said Friday that they had responded to new proposals to settle Britain's 11-month coal strike and had called for the immediate resumption of negotiations with employers. Ted Willis, general secretary of the Trades Union Congress, explained the proposals to the board of the National Union of Mineworkers. He drew up the plan in sessions with Ian MacGregor, chairman of the state-run National Coal Board. No details were made public.

British television and press reports said the proposals included a compromise about closing 20 unprofitable mines, the issue over which the strike started in March. The compromise reportedly included a concession by the coal board not to press its demands that the miners' union agree to discuss closing mines on economic grounds as a condition for reopening talks.

U.S. Seizes Colombian Jet in Drug Case

MIAMI (AP) -A Colombian cargo jet that had been used to smuggle nearly 2,500 pounds (1,134 kilograms) of cocaine amid a shipment of flowers was seized by customs agents Friday, authorities said. It was the third largest drug seizure in U.S. history.

Agents confiscated the Avianca Boeing 747 cargo plane, valued at $119 million, three hours after it landed after a flight from Colombia. The jet was seized "on the basis of Avianca having the knowledge" of the cocaine being aboard, said a U.S. Customs spokesman, Cliff Stallings.

He said it would cost Avianca "a very substantial penalty, well over a million dollars I would guess" to retrieve the jet. None of the crew was Mr. Papandreou said after visiting taken into custody, but Robert Battard, regional customs commissioner, said arrests were pending. The cocaine's destination was Montreal, according to a spokesman for the vice president's task force on drags.

The third and final report by the organization's Special Task Force on Professional Liability and Insurance, released Thursday, said: "It makes no sense for a renowned surgeon in New York to have to pay an $80,000-a-year insurance premium to practice medicine. It makes no sense for insurance companies to pay more money to law-yers than to injured persons."

The previous reports noted that Americans were filing three times as many medical malpractice claims as they did 10 years ago and were winning record settlements.

Mr. Stockman, the director of the Office of Management and Budget in the White House, said Wednesday that many farmers would be forced out of business because "that is the way a dynamic economy works."

Giving more federal help, he said, would be a "very bad signal to all the other groups who have had either a current or past crisis for their program."

Last week, in congressional testi-mony, Mr. Stockman said he "can't figure out why the taxpayers of this country have the responsibility to refinance the bad debts willingly incurred by consenting adults who went out and bought farm land when the price was going up be-cause they could get rich."

Mrs. Stockman said her son did not seem to realize that fewer young people were choosing ca-reers as farmers because they could not afford it.

"Maybe we're living in an era where the family farm is not useful any more," she said. "I hope not because I don't want to think that's

She said her husband has thought about quitting farming.
"We've had an abundance of crops and we're just not getting any money at all for our crops," she said. "When I looked at our books last week and found out how much money we lost, I was awed. But, you know, we've chosen this kind of a life."

Doctors Choose 3d Recipient of Artificial Heart

The Associated Press LOUISVILLE Kentucky -A 58-year-old man with conges-tive heart disease will become the third artificial heart recipient Sunday, at the hospital where the last artificial heart patient, William J. Schroeder, underwent his operation in November. The new patient is Murray P. Haydon, a retired Louisville as-sembly line worker, who has had heart trouble since 1981. Dr. William C. DeVries, who will lead the operating team. said Friday that the drugs Mr. Haydon had been receiving are now ineffective.

The plastic and metal heart to be implanted in Mr. Haydon is a Jarvik-7, the model that was implanted in Mr. Schroeder on Nov. 25 at Humana Hospital Audnbon. Mr. Schroeder, who celebrated his 53d birthday Thursday, is still at the hospital.

The first artificial heart recipient, Dr. Barney B. Clark, re-ceived a Jarvik-7 heart on Dec. 2. 1982, at the University of Utah. He lived for 112 days with the device and died on March 23, 1983.

Justice by Rank in Navy?

The nasty specter of justice by rank has been ons. This last is important: The weapons raised in the case of the Navy vice admiral, Joseph Metcalf III, who led the invasion of Grenada in 1983. For bringing back Soviet guns as souvenirs, he was given only a letter of caution." Meanwhile, lower-ranking Marines and soldiers were court-martialed, fined, imprisoned and drummed out of the service for what looks like the same offense.

The Navy responds by saying it was not the same offense: More than 300 Marines who also tried to bring home captured Soviet-made weapons were also not punished, but were, rather, given amnesty for turning the weapons in. Only four Marines, who ignored the amnesty offer and tried to smuggle and sell the captured arms, were charged, the Navy says.

This defense, however, ignores several considerations. The public is being asked to believe of Admiral Metcalf that he and his staff were unaware of the efforts being made by Marine officers under his command to retrieve captured weapons from their men; that none of them was aware of the military regulations controlling war trophies; and that, furthermore, none of them was aware of the law banning the importation of automatic weapseized from the admiral and his staff by U.S. Customs were AK-47s — 24 of them. These are not among the kinds of weapons — rifles and pistols — that, after being removed from the Marines and rendered inoperable, were returned to them as permissible "war tro-phies." The AK-47 is an automatic weapon, a machine gun, regarded as especially dangerous and often associated with criminal activity, and it may not be brought into the country except under specific, statutory conditions.

The Navy has announced it is reviewing the sentences handed down to the Marines convicted in the related cases. Some soldiers were also convicted, and we trust the Army is reviewing those cases. That is the least the services can do to lift the corrosive suspicion that Admiral Metcalf's look-ma-no-hands performance, and the Navy's apparent old-boy treatment of him, have created in this case.

It is disappointing and - within some parts of the Navy, it is reported — demoralizing that the Navy and Admiral Metcalf should choose to do the least. This is responsibility? This is leadership? This is our Navy?

The Elections in Korea

A chilling police rush to "protect" a return-ing opposition figure brought the government of South Korea deservedly harsh condemnation just last weekend. On Tuesday, however, an election was held that produced a rather contrary reaction. The party of Kim Dae Jung, the returning exile, ran directly against the "military dictatorship" of Chun Doo Hwan and took 50 seats. The result is being read as a favorable comment on President Chun's loosening of the political process in the last year.

Did some of us perhaps give too much importance to the well-publicized drama of Kim Dae Jung's return? The image of him as an abused politician seems not to square with the reality of the leeway offered his party in the campaign and with its success at the polls. But there is a reasonable explanation for it.

- President Chun has the police on tap. He wanted to demonstrate his control of the turf when Mr. Kim returned, and he did, in a heavy-handed way. It remains, however, that President Chun, partly in response to American "quiet diplomacy," has been opening up the system somewhat: releasing prisoners, readmitting banned people to academic and po-litical life. President Chun fit Mr. Kim into this pattern, letting him back in time to resume a shadow political role and to give his party a home stretch boost - a kind of advertisement for President Chun too. There is no contradiction between the airport rough stuff and an electoral process giving the opposition wider play: both reflect Mr. Chun's decisions. And both leave Mr. Chun firmly in control. This is the point. The military dominates politics, justifying it by the evident aggressiveness of communist North Korea. Mr. Chun, a retired general, represents the military class. Moreover, Korea's is a presidential system: the national assembly has no real power and the constitution gives the president's party a lock on it. The opposition will have more of a forum now. This could produce street and student actions of a sort that have traditionally led opposition has no ready way to reach power. How is change to come about in a place like South Korea, with an increasingly middleclass society eager for democracy and an ambitious officer class bent on power? Internal forces will supply most of the answer. As South Korea's defender, patron and well-wisher, however, Washington cannot stop pressing for change. It must do all it can to guide the Koreans institutionally and to school them against abuses of police power. Otherwise, the cause of democracy is undermined there, and support for Korea is undermined here.

Something else is undermined, too. If the American government does not work effectively for freedom in friendly states, it diminishes its claim to be truly interested in working for freedom in unfriendly states. Korea is testing American good faith.

exempt from the duty to report possible evidence of crime? They claim that privilege, in to pay a fine of $500,000. report suspiciously large cash deposits. Washington is right to keep up the pressure.

Congressional investigators and the president's Commission on Organized Crime are convinced that too many financial institutions look the other way when customers haul in bags or suitcases of small bills. Too often, the deposit is "street money" from illegal drug sales that needs to be laundered - made to appear legitimate by disguising its origin.

"We're not in the law-enforcement business," a Bank of Boston spokesman said defending its lack of interest in the origins of small bills shipped to Boston by Swiss banks in exchange for bricks of new $100 bills.

Banks are not supposed to spy on their customers, but neither are they pledged to keep their suspicions to themselves. In fact, the Boston bank committed a crime. To help federal investigators pursue drug traders, the law requires reports of every cash transaction with foreign banks exceeding $10,000. The Bank of > knowingly committing a felony, but contends that it was merely negligent. That inconsistency strains the bank's credit with the public no matter what becomes of the further reports about cash transactions with a leading member of the underworld in Boston. More experience with the disclosure law may persuade Congress to make money-laundering itself a crime. And to encourage reporting of suspicious transactions, Congress might also consider protecting bank employees against lawsuits in case their suspicions turn out to be completely unfounded.

Meanwhile, banks had better look to their reputations by policing themselves against drug money. And gambling casinos, too. The Treasury commendably extended the reporting requirement to casinos, where money is easily laundered by buying and again cashing chips. In that respect, the Treasury explained, casinos behave like banks.

Deception in the Kremlin

The attention given to President Chernen-ko's state of health might well be criticized as excessive. Certainly, as leader of a superpower, he deserves banner headlines if he did indeed suffer a stroke and was brought back to life. But why should such speculation be necessary? The answer is that learning the truth from Soviet sources is as difficult as finding pearls in oysters. The Kremlin has so much to hide that deception has become second nature to most Soviet officials. We now know that statements about President Andropov's state of health were false. Explanations for his successor's absence are more imaginative, but probably no more trustworthy; they may make most sense when regarded in terms of the power struggle for the succession, about which the Soviet population will not be consulted.

1935: Republican Assails Relief Bill WASHINGTON - The Republican onslaught against President F.D. Roosevelt's $4,880,000,000 relief work bill was taken up by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, who referred to the measure in a fiery speech [on Feb. 15] as "a blank check for the biggest sum ever passed in a single transaction." The measure, passed by the House and now submitted to the Senale, gives the President blanket authority to spend the sum as he sees fit to take 3,500,000 persons off the dole and give them relief by providing employment on public works projects. Senator Vandenburg called the bill "the most amazing legislative proposal in the history of this or any other democracy." "Its only merit," he shouted, "is a pious, puzzling hope."

Nakasone Ventures Out on a Limb in U.S. Trade Issues

T OKYO — A few years ago, it was fashionable among U.S. trade negotiators to say that it really made no difference who was prime minister of Japan, A prisoner of the bureaucracy and his party's business interests, he could make no holes even if he wanted to, which he probably did not - in the brick wall erected against imports from abroad.

Contrast that view with the remark attributed to a senior U.S. official summing up the results of the Jan. 2 conference of President Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone in Los Angeles: "When we've gotten commitments at this lev-el from this man [Mr. Nakasone], they've been carried out."

The exuberant official may merely have been applying some gloss to an otherwise dull luncheon encounter. Indeed, Japanese familiar with the Los Angeles meeting say no commitments were made, that Mr. Nakasone merely "heard" Mr. Reagan's latest pleas. Still, the change in American attitudes is striking.

How successful is Mr. Nakasone's track record in attacking the barriers U.S. businessmen say they find here? The statistical surface provides limited grounds for the Reagan administration's optimism. After all, the year in which he took office Japan ran a trade surplus of about $15 billion with the United States. Last year it By William Chapman reached $33 billion, and this year it could climb to $50 billion. Marketopening measures have reduced some tariff rates, but not many on products profitable to U.S. industries.

manage his own government on some ssues, given a half-free hand. The laborious task of rewriting certifications and standards has shown some quickening of pace in the last two years, although the record of actual business sales does not reflect it. Perhaps the most visible achievement was last spring's agreement to begin opening up Japanese financial mar-kets. The prime minister intervened relentlessly in that encounter with the U.S. Treasury, summoning his finance minister to make greater concessions and to work more swiftly. But in that case he had some latitude.

The statistical trade record of his tenure is not all bleak, either. U.S. imports here are growing, although not spectacularly, and are doing so in the face of the irrationally strong dollar that makes them more expensive. It is the wildly growing exports borne in the other direction by that same dollar that is pressuring Japan.

The Japanese financial community was itself divided on liberalization.

Japan can argue with much justification that a more reasonable exchange rate would fix things economically, but it would not work politically. The real rub these days is that the seemingly endless trade dis-putes have boiled down to big-ticket Mr. Nakasone has shown he can items. Mr. Reagan, in Los Angeles, listed four — telecommunications.

They are the sort of stuff on which real money rides - hence the powerful pressures from U.S. industry and they are the ones on which Mr. Nakasone is going to be tested as the Japanese prime minister who makes any significant difference. The levers he has to use are some-forest products, computers and drugs

what the same as an American president's. First he can muscle the bureaucracy into compliance, compelling it to make the dozens of minor changes in bidding rules, quality standards and safety regulations — the core of trade disputes here. Second. Mr. Nakasone must go to the mat with some hostile and suspicious members of his own Liberal Democratic Party, particularly those in the vise of agricultural interests that are the party's conservative anchor. They do not much like Mr. Nakasone anyway and, markets aside, would relish a chance to tarnish his image as an international statesman. He has just lost a bout over tariffs on, of all things, boned chicken, which is important to Southeast Asians. The official word is already out that the U.S. plea for more wood imports is doomed to the shelf.

What can one make of a prime minister who cannot cut a deal with his own kind on boned chicken and plywood? The perception is emerging that Japanese protectionists are wearying not just of the incessant American demands but of Mr. Nakasone's positive responses to them. A curious cycle has set in. The prime minister is popular with the public, and a large part of that popularity rests on his frequent appearances on the world stage with Mr. Reagan. He is unpopular with his party because those same performances result in yet more demands that offend the main constituents of the party.

As one Japanese economic official noted recently, powerful Diet members are asking each other, "Why should we suffer so much to make Mr. Nakasone look so good?"

Two decades of trade disputes, beginning with textiles and coursing on through autos, steel and color TV sets, have followed a pattern. Sound and fury are followed by smiles and agreements, which last until new embitterments arise. Cooler heads and Japanese concessions prevail, so far. But the Nakasone era is a bit dif-

He fully confident he understood the basic thrust of President Ronald Reagan's policy, and therefore did not need to check with Washington when trouble, with the embassy staff, who delivered a strong protest, and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Mr. Shultz said: "It's a very disgone astray." Last July, he called a press conference to say it was absurd to complain about the U.S. budget deficit because there is not one over all. Recently, armid a French political flap about New Caledonia, he said publicly, "the French must stay." Paris had to check around to find out what Washington's policy really was Mr. Galbraith boasted that he had taken the initiative because he did not believe in that "old-fashioned nonsense about not interfering in other countries' politics."

His idea of diplomacy, he has said "is really pushing the president's policies," which he presumes to know better than anybody, including Mr. Reagan. In what he called "the definitive argument for the Strategic Defeuse Juitiative," Mr. Galbraith published in The Wall Street Journal this week a fanciful account pretending to look back from the year 2045. It tells about a crisis in 2000 when, thanks to "star wars" weapons, war was avert-ed. The Soviet Union had been backing down since abandoning Cuba. That proved he said, "that both the strategic defense and the nuclear deterrent are necessary . . . The counterstrike force must be maintained as an integral aspect of a U.S. deterrent." At just that time, Mr. Reagan was telling The New York Times that he wants research to see if the defense "is practical and feasible." Then, "before deployment, I'd be willing to sit down and, in a sense, international-ize, to negotiate" to make sure the Russians knew "out goal was still the elimination of nuclear weapons."

There is a contradiction. Mr. Galbraith says missiles must be kept at a substantial level no matter what, and calls arms control "illusory." Some in the administration agree with him. It is not the president's stated view. The issue is not just whether the United States is better served by feisty, shoot-from-the-lip appointers or by prudent, experienced profes-sionals. The diplomats know the United States is not alone in the world: As Mr. Reagan put it, "it takes two to tango." Other countries need to know what is official.

No other country uses amateurs to represent it to the extent the United States does, and Mr. Reagan has named an unprecedented number of nonprofessional ambassadors. The question is whether qualifications for ambassadors go beyond handsome contributions to a campaign fund and an ideological affinity.

The recent outburst from Richard L. (Dixie) Walker, U.S. ambassador to South Korea, blaming Americans for getting beat up trying to accompany Kim Dae Jung is another case of undiplomatic sounding off. Both Mr. Galbraith and Mr. Walker saw fit to express U.S. foreign policy by endorsing Senator Jesse Helms's (Republican of North Carolina) re-ciec-

The United States is not a pip squeak country. Those who speak for it are heard. It cannot have as many foreign policies as it has cocky am-bassadors. Mr. Shultz deserves support in his effort to make clear that diplomacy requires discipline, judgment and expertise, and to make such appointments accordingly.

hinch we rushed out for the traditional walk in the nearest available forest, making sure to return home in time for Stenmark's second run.

This winter, with no World Cup victories, Stenmark is the God that failed. So instead of spending weekends analyzing how Stenmark won his 80th victory, Swedish people have turned to discussing God.

Astonishing as it seems, this most secularized of countries can still be stirred by religious controversy. It all started with a sermon by Stockholm's newly appointed bishop, Krister Stendahl, recently returned to Sweden after many years at Harvard

School of Divinity.

The bishop did not unleash the controversy with some new version of the ontological proof of God's existence, but by riding one of Sweden's two hobby-horses: taxes. (The other huddled in front of the TV watching only outright cheating on tax returns the first leg of his slalom runs. After only outright cheating on tax returns but also legal emigration with all painted by children?" one's belongings in Order to enlov milder climate and less punitive taxes in Switzerland, Spain or England.

Those Swedes who emigrate are refusing to bear their social burden, the bishop maintained. In placing their own interests and those of their family before society's, they are egoists or, in short, sinners. He called on Christians to condemn this perfectly legal behavior of their brethren. The bishop's sermon predictably delighted the Social Democrats while the opposition, just as predictably, raised hell about religious functionar ies meddling in politics.

The former Conservative Party leader, Gösta Bohman had, a few days before, fulminated against what he termed a politicized church. He demanded that the church respect Swedish law and abstain from encouraging, for example, the refusal to carry arms. The Swedish church, Mr. Bohman complained, weakens the national will to resist a possible fusion has been in full swing in both daily papers and prime time radio and television. Some accuse the bishop of bad theology and careless reading of the Bible. Jesus did not condemn the Prodigal Son for leaving home with all his worldly goods. Nowhere in the Gospels does Jesus brand the transfer of funds across borders a sin. One conservative bishop even contended that present taxation levels are against the The Archbishop of Sweden, Bertil Werkström, jumped into the melee by saying "Gosta Bohman challenges the entire Christian community in Sweden" and that he wished to censor the clergy's right of free speech. What the discussion comes down to is what role the state church should play in Sweden. Should it merely, as the conservative critics wish, tend to the spiritual needs of its members, or should it, as the more radical members want, also take an active political stance in questions such as aid to the Third World and the nuclear freeze? Does the fact that Sweden has a state church - the priests and the bishops are all paid by the government — in any way cartail what can be said in the pulpit?

The radical priests like to compare themselves to their activist colleagues in Latin America and Poland; their critics point out that they want to both have their cake and eat it. You can't be in opposition to the government that is giving you your daily bread. But the conservatives' point of view is most un-Swedish. In Sweden, even artists and writers. whose main program is the overthrow of what they call our bourgeois capi-talist state are handsomely rewarded with state stipends and grants.!

No resolution to the dilemma is in sight, and God has not yet given any signs whether He approves or disap-proves of Swedes placing their money in Swiss rather than in Swedish banks. What is clear is that God is far from dead in Sweden where a superficial glance might have led an outside observer to think that He had been replaced by an ombudsman.

A Case of Lost Innocence in Foreign Policy Arena

N EW YORK — In 1867, a young American named Clemens traveled through Europe and the Middle East, sending back long letters to a San Francisco newspa-per. The letters were published in a book and made the name he signed famous — Mark Twain.

The book was called "The Innocents Abroad." The title was purloined and perverted on Feb. 6 by President Ronald Reagan in his State of the Union Address: "We cannot play innocents abroad in a world that is not innocent," the president asserted.

Certainly our president projected no innocence in his own world view. What he called "the new freedom" in the speech often sounded much more like "the new cynicism." There was nothing innocent, for instance, in equating the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan with the Sandinist revolution in Nicaragua. Both represent such evil, such original sin, that, under the doctrines of the new cynicism, the United States is morally justified in financially sup-porting resistance to either.

By Richard Reeves

They are clever cynics in the White House, calculating that perhaps the public and Congress might support the overthrow of the San-dinists in the name of killing Russians in Afghanistan. The idea is to link the two in both the innocent minds of the public and the not-soinnocent covert appropriations approved by Congress.

Ah, innocence! Remember when the same people were telling us that the covert anti-Sandinist activity was purely to stop the "flow of arms" to Salvadoran guerrillas? Ah, cynicism! They have lied to us from the very beginning and they will be lying to us on the day we pay for another invasion of Nicaragua — in the tradition of the four by the U.S. Marines since 1909. Ah, history! ade Ish American Says He Saw Mengele as U.S. Prisoner

By Jay Mathews
Weshington Post Service
LOS ANGELES — A former U.S. soldier has said that he saw a man identified as Dr. Josef Men-gele at an American prisoner-of-war camp in Germany in 1945, the first witness to suggest that the Nazi war criminal once was in U.S.

Two U.S. senators who heard Thursday's account by Walter Kempthome, a retired acrospace engineer, said they would insist that the U.S. government deter-mine whether Dr. Mengele was in American custody and if so, how he could have escaped it.

Dr. Mengele, who would be 73 if alive, was a major in the Nazi SS and a physician at the Auschwitz-Birkenau camp, where as many as four million prisoners were gassed and cremated. Survivors have described his painful and sometimes crippling medical experiments on noose is tightening." Mr. Kempthorne, 59, of Riveride, California, said he wrote to Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies, after reading about the center's earlier disclosure that a U.S. intelligence officer thought Dr. Mengele had been briefly in U.S. custody in 1947. The Los Angeles-based center documents Nazi crimes and is named for a Nazi-

An army spokesman, Lieutenant Colonel Craig MacNab, said that Mr. Kempthome's report "is brand new information which we welcome." He said the army would work with the center and other officials to pursue it, but cited a large number of records that "all have to be gone through by hand."

The army recently has released other documents, one of which suggests Dr. Mengele once lived in

Mr. Kempthorne said that he was serving as a perimeter gnard at an army Counter-Intelligence Corps post at Idar-Oberstein, 30 miles (49 kilometers) east of Trier in southwestern Germany, when he encountered the man identified as side the post. There. Mr. Kernnthorne said he saw what appeared to be a German prisoner standing "at rigid atten-tion." The man "had a fixed look on his face," Mr. Kempthorne said. red-faced."

In a letter to Rabbi Hier released Thursday, Mr. Kempthorne quoted his conversation with the man's two U.S. guards: Mr. Kempthorne: "Geez, what are you guys trying to do to him? He's ready to fall over."

One of the guards: "We're getting him in shape to get hung. This here is Mengele. The bastard that sterilized 3,000 women at Auschwitz." Then, turning to the prisoner, the guard said, "C'mon, boy, you're good for another 100."

On his guard's command, the prisoner dropped to the ground to do more push-ups, but was too exhausted and was led away, Mr. Kempthome said.

Rabbi Hier said that Mr. Kempthorne's general description of the man nearly matches that of Dr. Mengele, but the fact that the retired soldier does not remember the prisoner's face could make identification from old photographs difficult.

U.S. Pupils in Brussels Get Anti-Terrorism Advice

By Steven J. Dryden Washington Post Service BRUSSELS — Efforts by Americans in Belgium to tighten security after a series of anti-NATO bombings have been extended to elementary school children, who are rectiving instruction to protect them from terrorist attacks.

A psychologist employed by the U.S. Embassy has visited kinder-garten and first and second grade classes at the International School of Brussels, where half the 1,100 students are American. An embassy security officer has met with parents to offer advice on safety.

The psychologist, Beth Huse, said she had encouraged the children to "play it safe with strangers." She said she did not use the word "terrorist" in her presenta-tions, although some of the children were clearly aware of the worries of adults.

"When the school steps up secu-nity, they want to know why," she said.

Member of Soviet Politburo Will Visit U.S. Next Month

New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union's Ukrainian leader, Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, who is a mem-ber of the ruling Politburo, will visit the United States next month, it was announced here Thursday.

Mr. Sheherbitsky will be the highest-ranking Soviet official to visit Washington since Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko's trip in September and, before that, Leonid L. Brezhnev's visit in 1973. Mr. Brezhnev was then Communist Party general secretary.

Mr. Shcherbitsky will lead a delegation of the Supreme Soviet, the nominal national legislature.

State Department officials said that while he is in Washington, from March 4 to 7, he will be received by President Ronald Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

The announcement of the visit was made by Representative Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., the speaker of the House. The Soviet group will be returning a visit made by a House delegation to the Soviet Union in 1983.

In addition to being a Politburo member and the Communist leader of the Ukraine, which is the second-ranking Soviet republic in importance, Mr. Shcherbitsky is a member of the Supreme Soviet's Politburo since 1971.

Kim Watches for a Political Chance

By John Burgess
Washington Post Service
SEOUL — Since his tumultuous return a week ago, Kim Dae Jung, the dissident leader, has settled into a routine in his modest brick home in western Seoul -one of watching and waiting.

Police in khaki jackets stand guard outside the gate and along adjacent streets. They are there to make sure that Mr. Kim never comes out and that only foreign reporters and members of his imnediate family go in.

Visitors pass a sign declaring the area off limits for reasons of "na-tional security," and they must sign in at a special police booth.

Inside, Mr. Kim keeps abreast of politics through newspapers, televi-sion and telephones that the police are presumed to have tapped.

In an interview Friday, a week after he returned from two years of self-imposed exile in the United States, Mr. Kim said he had not decided on his next move. "I am watching the government's atti-tude," be said.

He said he still expects to have the meeting that he has requested with President Chun Doo Hwan, and that he now hoped the opposi-tion would follow a moderate course to facilitate such a meeting.

He also said that he has asked the government to end his confinement, which keeps him from meeting with his former political allies.
"If house arrest is not lifted, I must take other measures to communicate with them." he said. He did not elaborate.

Mr. Kim's hand has been strengthened by the performance of the New Korea Democratic Party, which is dominated by his followers, in elections Tuesday for the National Assembly. The party won 50 seats, and thereby became the largest opposition force. Some Western diplomats in

From His Guarded House in Seoul,

Scoul have expressed concern that the Chun government will feel threatened by the new party, orga-nized only one month before the elections, and crack down rather than accommodate it.

But an official in the ruling Democratic Justice Party gave a differ-ent view Friday. The vote showed that "people want stability, but they also want liberalization," he said. "We will have to accommodate those two desires."

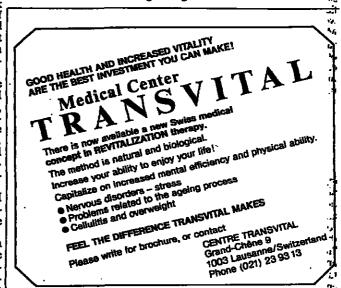

Another ruling party member, Choi Young Choul, an assembly member, said the results could aid stability. "People who have been noisy outside the National Assem-ture," he said Friday at party head quarters.

In the meantime, there have been some tentative signs of conciliation from the government, which will continue to control the assembly.

Prosecutors have been quoted as saying that they will use restraint in pursuing claims of election law vio-lations, most of which were lodged against opposition candidates. And the government party has agreed to meet with opposition leaders be-fore the convening of the assembly in late March or early April.

But there are also signs that the government is worried. On Thursday, authorities were reported to have sealed off the campuses of two Seoul universities, largely vacant because of winter vacation, out of bly have now been taken into the concern that demonstrators would official framework of the legisla- gather there.

grooves on the broadly rounded corners. It was all highly unusual.

Fortunately a German shipping label of June 1939, still pasted on the back of the sideboard, put the dealer on the track. Going through illustrated magazines of the early years of this century, he found a photograph showing the sideboard in situ — a house built outside Munich by the architect Emanuel von Seidl who had also designed the furniture.

The gentleman's wardrobe was even more sensational. A photograph of a matching cabinet reproduced in a monograph on Walter Gropius gave the clue; it had been designed by the architect in 1913, long before he became one of the key figures of the Bauhaus. The Victoria and Albert bought the two pieces together for £23,000.

As word got around that the museum was on the lookout for significant pieces of 20th-century furniture, private owners started contacting the museum.

Clive Wainwright got a letter from a woman from East Berlin who lived in Glasgow. She had brought to England a cabinet designed by Richard Riemerschmied in 1906. A glance at the photograph convinced Simon Jervis, the deputy keeper, and Wainwright of the importance of the piece.

It is an austere affair without any ornament; its decorative effect rests entirely on the architectural lines and use of the grain of the mahogany. The department decided to buy the cabinet on the strength of a photograph.

Acquisitions are not so easy when it comes to American furniture because of distance. Few pieces were shipped to Europe. They have to be bought on the spot. Jervis and Wainwright have had to use what rare traveling opportuni-ties come their way since there is hardly any museum money for exploratory purposes.

The Associated Press AMSTERDAM — Art histori-ans have gleaned much of what they know about upper-class life 500 years ago from the work of one artist, whose detailed depiction of the period will be exhibited at the Rijksmuseum March 14 to June

The experts do not know who the artist was. Labeled "The Master of the Print Room" or the "Master of the Housebook," he or she is believed responsible for about 120 prints and paintings dating from about 1470 to 1500.

Thought to have worked in Germany's Rhineland, the artist did not sign or initial the works that survive. They are recognized as being by the same person because of similarities in style, subject and technique, according to J. P. Filedt Kok of the Rijksmuseum, who is organizing the exhibit. Working mostly in drypoint, the artist depicted hunting parties, ro-mantic interludes and elegant soquired a group of metal furniture mantic interludes and elegant so-designed in 1904 by Frank Lloyd cial gatherings, as well as biblical

The Clinical Eye and Sarcastic Humor of Otto Dix

By Edith Schloss

onal Herald Tribione ROME — Otto Dix, just out of art school, found himself propelled as a soldier into the nightmarish trench warfare of the first World War when practically still a boy. This experience and his involvement with social revolt after the war left its mark on his outlook, though it never tempered his appetite for close observation and painstaking workmanship.

Half-dead soldiers, brawls in er cellars, the frightful nakedness of undernourished and abused women, the deviousness and vanity of modish frumps, and also the intelligent complex faces of Dix's friends were examined with a relentlessly clinical eye.

His approach is above all painterly. Though for him truthfulness was imperative, he was quite aware, like Goya, that art has to be made up and is after all invention. Still he symbols are interspersed with paint came as close as he could allow himself to the horror and ugliness of his reality, with gnarled outline, slashing marks, broomstick-like swipes and biting color. He also shows sarcastic humor and joviality and much hidden sentiment.

This sentiment and Dix's unadorned rough angular line, borrowed from the vigor of German folk art and naive peasant painting, is best seen here in "The Young Girl", "The Witch", "Self in Profile" and "The Baby". There are some exceptional oils and watercolors, rarely shown before and worth the whole show, as well as many fine drawings and prints.

Reagan Interview Leaves The Tax Issue in Tatters

By LEONARD SILK

SATURDAY-SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 16-17, 1985

New York Times Service EW YORK - Is there or isn't there going to be a major overhaul of the federal tax system this year? And, if there is, what sort of overhaul will it be? President Ronald Reagan has thrown the tax issue into a state of utter confusion by saying in an interview with The Wall Street Journal, that he had misgivings about increasing corporate taxes as part of his administration's tax proposal. In his State of the Union Message last week, he had just urged Congress to adopt his tax plan as "a historic reform of tax simplification for fairness and growth."

But in his interview, Mr. Reagan said he was unaware of the Treasury's proposal to in-raise business taxes. to be convinced of the need to do that because I'm a believer that one day we must recognize that only people pay taxes."

It is not easy to parse that statement, but it is reasonably clear that the president is still not convinced of the need to raise business taxes. His interview statement produced a great round of expressions of relief and joy from the business lobbyists in Washington. However, it raised doubts that any tax-simplification plan that did not shift taxes toward business could achieve broad enough support in Congress to be enacted this year.

Representative Jack Kemp, the Republican supply-sider who is seen as a possible candidate to succeed Mr. Reagan as president, said that, "if it looks like the White House has sold out to corporate America, they'll lose too many Democrats to make this

It is possible that too much importance is being attached to the president's off-the-cuff response to an interview question. He has never been known as a "detail" man. But it is nevertheless remarkable that, having committed himself so heavily to a major effort at tax simplification this year, he does not appear to know what is in the administration's plan, worked out under the supervision of Donald T. Regan, who has now moved over from the Treasury Department to become the White House chief of

OR is this issue of the impact of the tax-revision bill on business a matter of mere detail. It has received heavy attention not only from the business lobbyists but already in Congress and in the press. It is a crucial element in the administration's tax proposal that would eliminate the huge distortions that now exist in the taxation of business income which result in some profit-making companies paying no taxes at all or even enjoying a "negative income tax," that is, getting tax refunds from the government — while other companies pay taxes close to the top-bracket rate of 46 percent.

The Treasury proposal would still allow companies to make depreciation deductions, but only to the extent they would approximate the actual decline in the useful economic life of capital goods, rather than allowing the accelerated depreciation of the present law. The proposal would also eliminate the investment-tax credit. But it would lower the corporate tax rate to 33 percent from the present 46 percent, and it would also adjust depreciation allowances for inflation and permit corporations to (Continued on Page 9, Col. 1)

Baker Says Bid Was Little Help

By Jane Seaberry

WASHINGTON — Treasury
Secretary James A. Baker 3d said
Friday that the United States in the past few weeks had taken the un-usual step of intervening in foreignexchange markets to slow the rise of the dollar.

The currency fell Friday in Europe and New York for the second rope and New York for the second consecutive day, after almost two weeks of record-breaking trading. A senior Reagan administration official said the government had modified its position and intervened in cases other than when markets are "disorderly," a rigid free-market principle criticized by Western European governments. Western European governments whose currencies have fallen steadily against the dollar.

In late New York trading Friday.

the dollar was at 3.26 Deutsche marks, down from 3.2865 late Thursday; 9.99 French francs, against 10.06; and 2.7715 Swiss francs, compared with 2.797. The British pound was trading in New York at $1.108, up from $1.0955

The senior official would not elaborate on the new conditions under which intervention would take place. Mr. Baker would not say when or how many times the government had intervened.

Mr. Baker was asked whether the interventions had been successful. "I think that there was some effect, so I suppose you'd have to say to that extent they were effective," he said. "But the dollar continued to rise notwithstanding those interventions. What I can't tell you is how much more it would have risen if we had not intervened."

In intervening, a central bank buys its currency when it is going down or sells in an effort to bring a rapidly rising currency's value down or keep speculators off bal-ance. The Federal Reserve Board could also ask foreign governments to act in its behalf, financial ana-

Some foreign-exchange analysts said Friday that they had not noticed any disorderliness in the foreign-exchange markets and that if the government had intervened it was in small doses.

Mr. Baker said the decision to intervene came out of a meeting Jan. 17 between his predecessor, T. Regan, and the finance ministers of Britain, France, West Germany and Japan.

"I think the position is basically that it's our view that it's best done and more properly done only in the case of disorderly markets," Mr. Baker said. "There were discussions at the last' finance ministers' meeting "wherein we agreed to take a look at it, when to do so would be

"That's a rather vague standard. We have done that since then. Without getting into more detail, we have intervened and we have in fact done so since I've been here." Mr. Baker took over as Treasury Secretary on Feb. 3.

Each shift at the Japanese ce-ramics-maker's San Diego plant begins this way. Occasionally, the routine is varied by awards ceremonies honoring years of service with the company. As the honored employees go to the platform to receive service medals and flowers, they are applauded by their fellow employ-ees. The production report by the Federal Reserve Board said the in-

IMF Blocks Brazil Credit,

The IMF decision is a setback for Brazil - considered one of the T success stories of the Latin Ameri-10 can debt crisis — and its bank lenders. The banks had almost completed negotiations on an agreement that would have permitted Brazil to repay $45 hillion of debts, maturing between 1985 and 1991, over a -year period.

The banks and Brazil adjourned negotiations Wednesday until thecountry comes to terms with the IMF. Banks generally decline to make new agreements with debtor with their IMF programs.

Stock Exchange sagged in moderately active trading Friday, failing again to break through the barrier of 1,300 on the Dow Jones industrial osses, but otherwise the trading was dull in the ession before a three-day weekend. The Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.86 to 1,282.02, its second consecutive loss after hitting a record high of 1,297.92. For the week, the Dow lost 7.95. Declines led advances by a 9-to-7 ratio. Volume totaled 106.5 million shares, down from 139.7 million Thursday. Alan Ackerman of Herzfeld & Stern said the decline was "moderate and not unexpected" in view of the big rise in the stock market over the previous six weeks. Mr. Ackerman said the market was buoyed by "positive psychology" resulting from "less fear of interest climbing out of control and the end of recession fears."

Ricky Harrington of Interstate Securities in Charlotte, North Carolina, said the stock market had been trading in a range between 1,260 and 1,300 on the Dow for two and a half weeks and would probably be confined to that range for another two weeks or so.

He said the basic trend of the market was still upward. The longer it takes to break through 1,300, he said, "the more dramatic and powerful the move will be when it takes place.

John Smith of Fahnestock & Co. said that "it wouldn't take much" to put the Dow over 1,300. There isn't much interest in selling the market down," he said, adding that there were ample

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York itock Exchange sagged in moderately active rading Friday, failing again to break through more than a million shares each crossed near the close. The Florida-based supermarket chain re-Several technology issues had moderate cently won a proxy fight with a dissident shareholder group.

Phillips Petroleum was second, off % to 48%. Phillips officials questioned whether Carl C. Icahn could secure financing for his bid for 70 million shares at $60 a share.

Unocal was third, off 11/4 to 461/4. T. Boone Pickens and partners, who last year made a bid for Phillips, have acquired 7.9 percent of Uncal's stock. The stock had risen recently in response to takeover rumors, but Mr. Pickens said his group was not planning a takeover.

Other oil issues weakened, with Exxon dropping % to 47%, Mobil 1/2 to 27%, Indiana Standard I to 60, Chevron % to 331/2 and Atlantic Richfield 11/2 to 47/4.

Pan American Corp., which reported a fourth-quarter loss of $92.3 million compared with a loss of $58.6 million a year earlier, rose 4

General Motors lost % to 78%, Ford % to 45% and Chrysler % to 32½.

IBM lost % to 131% and Cray Research dropped 2% to 70.

Digital Equipment added 1% to 111% and Data General advanced % to 58%. But elsewhere in the technology group, Advanced Micro Devices lost 1% to 33%, Texas Instruments % to 1181/2, Computervision 2 to 381/2, Burroughs 1% to 60% and Hewlett Packard % to

Grumman Will Restructure Its Aerospace Unit

BETHPAGE, New York -

Grumman Cerp. said it is breaking up its aerospace subsidiary into separate divisions, as part of a corporate-restructuring plan aimed at cutting costs and more effectively competing for contracts.

John Bierwirth, the chairman. said Thursday that Grumman, a holding company with diversified manufacturing and service operations, will create seven divisions aimed at specific markets, each headed by a division president. Mr. Bierwirth said Grumman one of the Navy's prime aircraft contractors, is taking these and other steps to "reduce our costs so that we are more competitive in our increasingly tough business envi-

Ford's Tractor Proposal

Assailed by Auto Workers

DETROIT - The United Auto Workers union has condemned Ford Motor Co.'s move to ship tractor business to Europe as a violation of its 1984 labor pact.

Ford announced Thursday that t would move a large portion of its U.S. tractor operations to England and Belgium, displacing 230 workers in Romeo, Michigan.

will allow Grumman "to use a rifle rather than a shotgun approach when we go after new contracts."

He said that if Grumman succeeds in winning contracts for working on the National Aeronautics and Space Administration planned manned space station or on the government's planned mili-tary missile-guidance system, the company would set up separate divisions to handle those operations.

Grumman earlier reported 1984 earnings of $108.4 million, or $3.62 per share, a 2-percent drop from 1983 earnings of $110.7 million, or $3.82 per share. Revenue was $2.6 billion, a 15.5-percent rise over 1983 revenue of $2.25 billion.

Grumman closed at $28.75 on the New York Stock Exchange Thursday, down 37.5 cents.

Citicorp Disputes Moody's Review

NEW YORK - Citicorp said Friday that it disagreed with a decision by Moody's In-vestors Service to place $18.9 billion of its debt under review for a possible downgrading. Moody's cited changes in Citicorp's capital structure, which have led to a decrease in the assets of the lead bank, Citibank NA, as a percentage of consolidated assets.

But Citicorp called the diverand stability. "This shift is a direct result of a strategic plan to diversify our funding sources, increase direct access to consumer funds, and regionalize our activities," it said.

Conrail, Its 10 Unions

PHILADELPHIA - Conrail has reached an

PHILADELPHIA — Conrail has reached an agreement with 10 unions representing 23,000 of its 35,000 union employees to raise their wages to the level earned by workers on other major U.S. railroads.

Employees of the Philadelphia-based freight railroad took wage cuts averaging 12 percent in 1981 when Conrail was losing millions of dollars. Conrail is now profitable.

1981 when Contail was losing militons of dol-lars. Contail is now profitable.

The agreement Thursday to restore wages came one week after Elizabeth H. Dole, the U.S. transportation secretary, chose to sell the government's 85-percent ownership in Contail to Norfolk Southern Corp. of Norfolk, Virginia, Fac 81.7 billion

The Phillips Independent Directors Ask You to Vote "FOR" The Recapitalization

This statement has been prepared by the independent, outside directors of Phillips Petroleum Company, comprising over two-thirds of the members of the Phillips board.

We wish to express our unanimous judgment that the Recapitalization recommended by the board to the shareholders, to be voted on February 22nd, is clearly in the best interests of all the shareholders.

- As independent, outside directors, we are required to exercise our best business judgment in evaluating proposals to acquire Phillips. We have a unique position from which to do this. We are neither employees of the Company — nor dependent upon our directors' fees for our standard of living. Therefore, we have no particular bias in making a business judgment on what is the best way to maximize shareholder value for all Phillips shareholders.
- Our assessment of Phillips value is quite different from that being put forth by stock market traders. We believe that the prices at which these people are willing now to buy and sell Phillips shares are based upon short-term, quick-buck considerations.
- Our sole interest is in maximizing shareholder value for all Phillips shareholders.

- We reviewed and evaluated the Mesa proposal and the Icahn proposals announced on February 4, February 8 and February 12 and concluded that none of these proposals met that critical test.
- We do not believe that the Note Purchase Rights Plan that we have adopted is a "poison pill." These "Fair Value" Rights guarantee that our shareholders are treated fairly and equally and cannot be forced to accept less than $62 in cash for their shares.
- We have had and continue to have an open mind with respect to reviewing and evaluating any offers that would help maximize shareholder value for all Phillips shareholders. We have no reason to oppose, and are not opposed to, any fair offer which would accomplish this. To date, none has been forthcoming.

We believe Phillips is capable of great future financial performance for the shareholders and hence, in our judgment, represents values substantially in excess of current offers. The proposed recapitalization permits all shareholders to share in that future. At the same time, it provides enhanced present value for all shareholders. The recapitalization is an alternative to an ill-timed sale of the Company at this period of uncertainty in the oil business. We urge all shareholders to support the plan.

Brazil failed to meet its inflation targets through all of 1984, but was able to continue borrowing from the IMF because the agency waived its inflation and monetary requirements, in large part because Brazil was exceeding goals in nearly all other areas. The country is in the middle of a three-year IMF pact signed in February 1983. Almost immediately after it signed the initial agreement two years ago, the country fell out of compliance. The IMF and the November 1983. That year, however, Brazil was broke and almost daily had to scrape up the cash it needed to buy imports and pay a minimal amount of interest to its bank lenders. Now, mainly because of a $13-billion trade surplus last year, the country has about $8 billion in foreign cur rency reserves.

As the Old South of plantations, small towns and extended families has given way to the flattened, homogenized landscape of the New - shopping malls, interstate highways, and prefab houses the regional literature, too, has changed. The work of such younger Southerners as Bobbie Ann Mason, Barry Hannah, Marsha Norman, and the late Breece D'J Pancake may still commemorate a specific place, but those places are communities that have misplaced their mores and their history. Instead of rebelling against the vicious hold of ancestry and tradition, the characters in this fiction tend to mourn the loss of their identity, the impermanence of their lives.

"Canaan," Charlie Smith's first novel, is a throwis violence and passion, not alienation; its themes, "Canaan" zipping along. Smith has contrived a land, and family and the enduring bonds of blood. Smith's language, too, stands in sharp contrast to the pared-down, anomic prose employed by so many of his contemporaries; lyrical and dense, it carries echoes of William Faulkner and Thomas Wolfe.

Talented as Smith is, he has written an astonishingly uneven novel. His lush prose has a way of turning overripe - "angel or devil he had streng he had will, he had nerve: he would win" - and his taste for the Gothic often devolves into the merely grotesque. Interspersed with nostalgic, finely observed accounts of fumbling teen-age attempts at first love, are crude, repetitious sex scenes, set down in breathy romance-novel prose. And alongside subtle passages that conjure up small-town life during the 1950s are clumsy attempts to portentously foreshadow the future.

In fact, in his eagerness to keep the narrative tricked-up plot that reads like a melodramatic epi-sode of "Dallas." Besides madness and incest, we are treated to suicide, attempted murder, and wifebeating. One character tries to burn down the family manse by dousing it with gasoline, and another goes at it with an electric saw.

Canaan - the Burdette family's homestead comes across as both a very real place and a mythic kingdom: 25,000 acres of piney forests, cotton fields, and swamp that stretch as far as the eve can see; a promised land, reclaimed from nature by hard work, ruled and fought over by individual Bur-

If "Canaan" is essentially the story of three generations of Burdettes — and, in a sense, another tale of how the glorious South fell into decline - it is minated, nonetheless, by the figure of a woman, Elizabeth Bonnet Burdette. Elizabeth was once known as "the Beauty of Charleston," and she still lives every day as if it were a cotillion. She is a modern-day Scarlett O'Hara, proud, willful, and good at collecting men — the sort of woman who wears peculiar hats, paints her toenails red, and drives sports cars much too fast. You can picture her being played, in the television movie version of "Canaan," by Elizabeth Ashley or maybe Margot

At times, Elizabeth Bonnet Burdette is so broadly drawn, so much a type, that she comes across as just that — a character sketch in need of an actress to interpret her and give her a real dimension. Still, there are moments when Smith succeeds in penetrating her hard, brilliant surface, makes us undertrating her hard, brilliant surface, makes us under-stand her choice of negligence over an ordered life, her desperate need to escape the confinements of family and tradition. It is at such moments that "Canaan" gives the reader intimations that it is not just another piece of commercial fiction but a liter-ary work that, for all its flaws, helps us to re-imagine the South.

Japan Car Quotas Report Released

WASHINGTON — Limiting the number of Japanese cars shipped to the United States cost American consumers $15.7 billion between 1981 and 1984, a report by the U.S. International Trade Com-

About $3.3 billion of that cost came in the form of higher prices of Japanese cars as a result of the trade restrictions, the agency said. The rest was due to higher prices of American-made cars. The report, released this week was requested by the House Ways and Means trade subcommittee. Under an agreement with the United States, Japan has limited its. exports of cars to the U.S. market to 1.68 million vehicles a year dur-

Scotland Gears Up for France

rnational Herald Tribune PARIS - It is 16 years since Scotland last won a Five Nations rugby match in Paris, and veteran flanker David Leslie says he did not accept the captaincy with the idea of presiding this Saturday over an eighth consecutive Scottish defeat away against France. "Playing the French in Paris is a hurdle," the new captain said after a frigid final training session Friday morning. "but I like challenges."

French premonitions varied. An apparent minority of insiders feared a combination of Scottish spirit and dispirited French mistakes. More numerous seemed to be those trusting in coach Jacques Fouroux to fire up his experienced eam after its comedy of errors in a 9-9 draw with revamped England at Twickenham on Feb. 2.

Fouroux's buildup theme is revenge for the 21-12 upset by Scot-land in Edinburgh last March, when both teams reached the last jumped on the Celtics, opening a points and 13 rebounds, scored of the five Saturdays undefeated. eight points during the period as A lopsided penalty count influ-the Celtics opened up an 86-73 enced the result in the home team's favor and left unusual French bit-it lost there in 1971 and has lost on all six visits to the Paris stadium, starting in 1973. France's Five Nations record at the new Parc des Princes is 20 matches won, one drawn (with England in 1974) and three lost (to Wales in 1975 and to England in 1980 and 1982).

A blanket of straw was protecting the Paris turf against frost as biting cold continued Friday. Snow in Cardiff forced postponement on Thursday of the other match due this weekend, Wales vs. England. A new date remained to A Scottish theme is winning at Five Nations matches due on are less match-fit than their coach-taken by the matches that frost and snow prevented on Jan. 19 (France) vs. Wales, Ireland vs. England), play could extend into April for the first time since 1973.

Three postponements in a Five Nations season is unprecedented, at least since the World War II break. Severe weather delayed two matches in 1947 and one in 1954, 1955, 1956 and 1982. The death of King George VI led to postpone-ment of England vs. Ireland in 1952, and a smallpox epidemic in Wales delayed a match in 1962. Ireland's home matches against Scotland and Wales were canceled in 1972 after bomb threats.

The present erratic winter — harsh cold interrupted by recordhigh temperatures early this month has upset a lot of calculations. The Welsh, who expected a tough debut in Paris on Jan. 19, will instead be "going into March unbeaten," as new captain Terry Holmes joked on Thursday. England's first two matches will both have been at home. The French, instead of starting confidently at home against Wales and building up to a finale in Dublin, started awkwardly at Twickenham and will finish against Wales after a month off. The weather has prevented play be set. With normally scheduled at club level, too, and many players French No. 8 Jean-Luc Joinel, 31.

Leslie and prop lain Milne were missed when Scotland went down to a surprise 18-15 defeat by newlook Ireland in Edinburgh on Feb. 2. After sweeping their four matches last year, for their first grand slam since 1925, the Scots go into their second match this year as the only team with a loss. That was a bad start for new coach Colin Telfer and captain Roy Laidlaw, who has handed the captaincy on to Leslie with relief. Having previously lost to Romania in Bucharest last May and to Australia in Edinburgh in December, the Scots come to Panis with a three-match losing streak. Any complacency is long gone.

Late injuries sidelined both firstchoice wings; Jim Pollock comes in on the left in place of Iwan Tukalo and Petc. Steven plays on the right in place of Roger Baird. There are 11 holdovers from the grand slam team, including halfbacks Laidlaw and John Rutherford - who have now played a record 24 international matches together - and fullback Reter Dods, the goalkicker, who has been averaging 13 points a match since the start of last year.

The newcomers include 6-foot-7 (2.01-meter) lock Tom Smith. Along with 6-foot-4 No. 8 lain Paxton Smith is crucial to Telfer's plan for dominating the lineouts.

. The French also field 11 survivors of last year's finale, with Philippe Dintrans replacing the retired Jean-Pierre Rives as captain. But despite Fouroux's emphasis on revenge, the overriding motivation may be just to keep surviving. After Twickenham - when France failed to score a try for the first time in a Five Nations match since 1975 — even such established and still young stars as flyhall Jean-Patrick Lescarboura and center Didier Codornion were told they were close to being dropped. Forwards are also at risk, and Joinel has described his return as a "double-ornothing" gamble. The team faces Scotland with its back to the wall. And also with unpublicized doubts about non-French referees. The Englishman due to control Saturday's match, Laurie Prideaux, has seen the lowest average of penalty goals per match of any Five Nations referee in the 1980s so far. Also, home teams have kicked an

Whatever their nationalities, they are all eccentric "Englishmen" when they ride the Cresta Run. For 100 years, the members of the St. Moritz Tobogganing Club have been risking life and limb for the pleasure of sliding down 1,212.25 meters (3,970 feet) of ice won the Bott's Handicap Cup this year, his first victory in a major competition after 12 years of riding the Cresta.

Julian Board, honorary treasurer of the chib and a mild-mannered London accountant off the slope, said the membership roll - about 950 names, only half of them British — is a closely guarded secret. "But it contains lots of princes, archdukes and knights." One commoner, Jack Glattfelder, a St. Moritz merchant of tea and caviar and one of the club's many Swiss members, was an active rider for 12 seasons before retiring from the slope eight years ago. He entered this year's Centenary Race, and won.

"It has something of the pioneer spirit." Sachs, who finished seventh in the Seniors' Cup, sponsors a race of his own each year. The prize: a set of buttons for a blazer. "There's nothing you can do with a cup. But buttons you can wear all year and be proud," he said.

Some losers, too, can be proud. Anyone who spins out at the long, sweeping Shuttlecock Bend automatically becomes a member of the even more exclusive Shut-tlecock Club, which holds a separate dinner each year.

"They even had an honorary member once, a horse called.

T OKYO — A museum reasur-ing Elvis Presley memorabilia will open in Tokyo this fall, Ameri-OKYO - A museum featurcan music and movie producer Jerry Weintraub said Thursday.

Weintraub said he and two Japanese partners will open the muse-um and that it will feature Presley trophies, records and costumes from a collection by Tom Parker, Presley's longtime manager.

Presley died of a heart attack at the age of 42, on Aug. 16, 1977. Weintraub said chose Tokyo because of the many Elvis Presley fans in the Japanese capital, although the singer never performed

"Objection, your honor. Counsel

"The Justice Department policy - a policy I hope Mr. Meese will continue - has a ceiling of $75 an hour on what a private lawyer can charge in a government case. Why doesn't it apply in this case?"

"Your honor, the Ethics in Government Act, under which Mr. Meese was investigated, places no restrictions on hourly rates. If a self-respecting lawyer in Washington charged less than $250 an hour he would become the laughingstock of the capital." "It is so noted. Counsel for the taxpayers will continue."

"Thank you, sir. American taxpayers resent the fact that Mr. Meese's attorneys are socking it to them. I wonder if learned counsel would submit a $721,000 bill if they knew Mr. Meese was paying it out of his own pocket."

"Objection. That is a theoretical "Sustained."

"Your honor, counsel for Mr. Meese has charged my clients $250 an hour for conversations with the press over a period of five and onehalf months. Why should the taxpayer pay for attorneys' meetings with reporters?"

"I can answer that, your honor.
Mr. Meese was being tried in the press as well as investigated by the special prosecutor. It was necessary to insure accurate reporting of allegations against him, or else Meese would take over the Justice Department under a dark cloud. It's in the taxpayers' interest to have a U.S. attorney general who is squeaky clean.

Your honor, just because Mr. Meese was cleared of criminal charges against him doesn't neces-sarily make him qualified to be attorney general. What about his bad judgment?"

"Objection. Mr. Meese's bad judgment has nothing to do with our legal bill."

"Your honor, I say it does. If Mr. Meese didn't show such extraordinarily bad judgment in the first place, the taxpayer would not be stuck for $721,000."

Even Connell: Custer's Latest Stand

By Samuel G. Freedman New York Times Service

SAUSALITO, California — "Even now, after a hundred years, his name alone will start an argument," Evan S. Connell writes of George Armstrong Cus-ter in his book "Son of the Morning Star."

"More significant men of his time can be discussed without passion because they are inextricably woven into a tapestry of the past, but this hotspur refuses to die. He stands forever on that dusty Montana slope."

Custer stands forever between the covers of countless books as well, from the dime fiction of the 1880s to scholarly tomes today. This makes it the more surprising that Connell's contribution to Little Bighorn literature has become a best-seller and a critical

There is also a story of personal vindication behind "Son of the Morning Star." The book that has sold 86,000 copies, that has been purchased for paperback by Harper & Row for $210,000, that has been named one of 1984's five best volumes of nonfiction by the National Book Critics Circle was turned down by several major New York publishers.

It was eventually bought by North Point Press, a Berkeley, California, publishing house that has 10 employees and makes a point of noting that its books are printed on acid-free paper.

Connell, a soft-spoken man with skin as leathery as the flight jackets he favors, has suddenly achieved a vogue. From 1957 until "Son of the Morning Star." he wrote 13 books of poetry, fiction and nonfiction, often getting admiring reviews but rarely making much money. He sometimes sup-ported himself by reading meters. delivering Christmas packages, distributing handbills and taking résumés at an unemployment of-

"Son of the Morning Star," however, has won Connell praise in periodicals from the Civil War Book Exchange to the Manches-ter Guardian. Just the other week. People magazine flew the author to the Little Bighorn where Indians slew Custer and all 250 of his troops on June 25, 1876 book of essays about the frontier. He wrote a 30-page essay on Billy the Kid, then went on to Custer and the Little Bighorn. Before long, that chapter had grown to nearly 90 pages. "At that point. I had to make a decision." Connell said. "I gave up the original idea and went with Custer.' The research and writing consumed four years. Connell read dozens of books about Custer and the Indian campaigns, corresponded with two Little Bighorn experts, John M. Carroll and Charles K. Mills, and contacted libraries and historical societies from California to Kentucky. Four times he visited the site of Custer's catastrophe. "I was absolutely fascinated by the detail," Connell said. "Not so much what is found in government reports as what turns up in diaries. The enlisted men, people you wouldn't expect it from, wrote some wonderful prose. It's all bizarre and very human. " I remember being surprised to read about Major Reno charging on an Indian village with his men wearing straw hats. I think a lot of historians, if they find something funny, don't put it in. They think it all has to be serious. and their books are so deadly

Beyond the humor, Connell also discovered the serious side of army life during the Indian cam-paigns — madness, suicide, desertion, maggot-infested provisions and an enormous naïvete among soldiers who had come from Eastern cities and never touched a firearm before enlist-

As for their controversial leader, Connell said: "I regard Custer as a professional soldier. He was a field commander, not someone making policy. He did his job fearlessly. People were always accusing him of being impetuous.

And I would agree with that, although Custer himself wouldn't. He got the job done, but apparently at a high cost to his own Connell also did extensive research on the Indian side of the story. He found many interviews with veterans of Little Bighorn, some of whom lived into the mid-20th century. From their ac-counts and from secondary sources, he put together portraits of chiefs such as Sitting Bull and very good there." Mangum said.

George Armstrong Custer

Crazy Horse, elaborate desc 'ptions of the Sun Dance ceremony and scalping techniques, and a picture of Indians angered as much by deceitful traders and disease-bearing settlers as by the broad designs of Manifest Desti-

For all of Connell's faith in his material, the publishing industry largely disagreed. But the book's subsequent success does not surprise its author.

"I always thought it was a pret-wild story," Connell said. "I had a feeling that since I found it so intensely interesting other people would too." ■ Bighorn Survey Planned

Archaeologists and volunteers plan the first survey of a secondary battleground in the Indian wars to learn more about the Battle of the Little Bighorn, United Press International reported. More than 250 people have volunteered to work with scientists in the five-week survey beginning in May, according to Neil Mangum, the Custer Battlefield National Monument historian. Archaeologists and volunteers last May found thousands of artifacts at the Custer Battlefield. which had been nearly denuded by a grass fire in 1983. Among the finds were skeletal remains and hundreds of spent cartridges and shell casings.

Evan S. Connell

- to shoot a portrait of him

The image is almost laughably

contrary to Connell's subdued nature. He approached the story of Custer (who won his stars as a general in the U.S. Civil War, then reverted to the rank of lieutenant colonel) not as an aficionado of the Indian wars, but as a writer bringing novelistic skills to a work of nonfiction. His book is most notable for its ironic voice and its eye for detail - Custer marching into one battle with a 16-man band on white horses; an Indian chief who is fearless in battle but terrified of a rudimen-

"There are two explanations for writing the book," the 60-year-old Connell said in a recent interview. "Just about all the kids in this country grew up on cow-boys and Indians. Maybe now it's

'Star Wars,' but when I grew up in Kansas City you could send in box tops, from Quaker Oats, I

"As far as this project goes, a few years ago I was sitting in a saloon wondering what to write next. I didn't have any ideas for a novel, and for years whenever I couldn't manufacture something successful, I simply worked on a subject that interested me. And
